

Connected Horsemanship's natural horsemanship clinic offers participants a fascinating insight into horse behaviour. Participants learn how horses use body language to communicate and establish hierarchy, leadership and cohesion within the herd.

Participants learn how to read the horse's body language and are taught how to alter their body language to communicate and influence the horse. They learn how to offer the horse appropriate boundaries, and discover how directing the horse's movement affects the horse's "frame of mind". They learn how to be grounded, clear, and consistent, and how to offer reward.

What lies behind us and what lies before us are small compared with what lies within us.

Ralph Waldo Emerson